"Tou will probably find your leg in the Lost and Found Department of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, at No. 9 Morris street," said Patsey, the

The leg was there. And piled alongside it was as strange a collection as any Pourteenth Street museum. A dead baby, perfectly preserved (in alcohol, too), has reposed slongside a bag of hissing pythone that were making strenuous efforts to get at two live monkeys in a nearby cage. In one corner lay a wooden bedstead, a mattress, two pillows, blankets and sheets, all of which, properly wrapped, had been once the dowry of one of Italy's daughters, who had carelessly left it on an "L" station

34,000 ARTICLES LOST IN THE CARS LAST YEAR.

The Strong articles found in subway and elevated trains last year and turned over to John Charlton, custodian, classifier and distributer in the Lost and Found Department of the Interborough, range from radium-the world's priceless mineral—to as aplen-did a collection of burglar's tools as every cracked a crib.

The list shows, too, that the more forgetful persons frequent elevated trains, for it was in the overhead structures that 22,000 of the $4,000 lost articles were found,

"I have kept a tabulated list of the things that have been found on ele-wated and in subway trains," said Chariton te-day, "and I will admit that sometimes, when I read it over, it surprises even me. A college professor, carrying a visi of radium to his labortrain, though it's value was so enorm ous he never could have replaced it. He showed up here in half an hour, and demanded it. The radium was returned to him next day, after he had proven ownership. That little bottle was the most coetly thing that ever was lost in the subway.

"It wasn't very long ago that a sub-way guard at the end of the line found a large tottle in one of the cars. He opened it and found the body of a baby, apparently a year old. The child was preserved in alcohol. That guard was so frightened by the find that he quit his job. The baby was claimed a couple of days later by the father and mother, but we turned them over to the police of th
